This is true because if the first four k 's are even, then the first four odd k 's must all be even, and if the first four k 's are odd, then the first four even k 's must all be odd. But I don't know how to prove that this holds in general. Can the above equation be proven using the law of large numbers? A: Denote by S_k the set of k 's such integers coprime to N . The question is equivalent to, knowing N
